Two proposals designed to subject the Central Intelligence Agency to closer congressional scrutiny were offered in the Senate yesterday.

Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy (D-Minn.) called for creation of a special Senate foreign relations subcommittee to make a "full and complete study" of the effects of CIA operations on foreign relations of the United States.

Sen. Stephen M. Young (D-Ohio) introduced a proposal which would establish a joint Senate-House committee, on a permanent basis, to oversee CIA operations.

Both senators, in floor statements accompanying their proposals, said CIA has been making policy as well as carrying it out.
